1 An example of section for the full paper

ATTENTION: These comments only apply to the full paper. Preliminary abstracts should better NOT have sections or references.

1.1 And a subsection

1.1.1 Even a subsubsection is possible

Full papers follow the same template as abstracts, with regard to paper size (a4), margins (2cm each), font size and type (Times New Roman 11pt or 12pt) and further details. Figures and tables must have a caption. Cite them as normal, e.g. Figure 1 and Table 1. The first paragraph of each section should not be indented, but the following lines should.

Citation schemes should follow the Chicago conventions, i.e. both author (year) as in Aitchison (1986) or else (author, year) styles may be used. For one or two authors, both names should appear (Pawlowsky-Glahn and Egozcue, 2001). For three or more authors, use the first name followed by et.al., like in Tolosana-Delgado et al. (2007).

Country	red meat	white meat	eggs
Ablandia	10.1	1.4	0.5
Cedenia	8.9	14.0	4.3
Fagalia	13.5	9.3	4.1

Table 1: Example of a table. Lines should be used reasonably, for instance to separate header from the main table body and to close the table itself
