

The mini-symposium is intended to present the state-of-the-art as well as to establish a discussion around the most interesting and practical optimisation strategies to be applied to real industrial applications. Moreover, inverse analysis techniques can also be presented as an encouraging possibility to solve engineering problems coming from the lack of data for both material and operation parameters. Focus is maintained on large simulations models to cover industrial needs.