

The effects of segregation on flow dynamics

Prof. Jim McElwaine
Department of Earth Sciences
Durham University

Segregation occurs in many geophysical flows including avalanches and rock-slides, but there is no generally accepted theory and almost no quantitative comparisons. We develop a general theory of segregation based on multi-component diffusion, analyse its consequences and compare the predictions with discrete element method simulations.